

A spell with Paul McKenna

The TV hypnotist and paranormal showman believes the human brain is now the dominant force on earth

CATCH UP with hypnotist Paul McKenna as he finishes an afternoon's filming for a new television show, The Paranormal World Of Paul McKenna.

Part of the showman's new act is to cure phobias before our eyes and today's subject is snooker ace Denis Taylor who suffers from claustrophobia. Well, not any more.

"We took him to a tunwe took nim to a tun-nel that runs beneath a stately home and he couldn't go down it earlier today," outlines the superstar hypnotist.

"But we zapped him and he went down it from one end to the other."

Other squeamish celebs in line for a brush with the in line for a brush with the McKenna magic are come-dian Bobby Davro who'll defeat a lifelong fear of spi-ders by calming holding a tarantula and disc jockey Ross King who'll walk a tightrope at a Blackpool circus to overcome a fear of heights.

But what does the mind doctor say to those who have a fear of stage hypno-tists?

How well-founded is the paranoia of those who feel there's something sinister ut an entertainment that closely resembles brain-washing? "They're right to sinister," says Paul cheerily.

"But brainwashing isn't hypnosis. Brainwashing involves drugs, torture, sleep deprivation and all those kind of things. Heavy conditioning. It's the kind of things that cults use, and real masters of trickery and manipulation, like evange-lists and the Adolf Hitlers
