

COURSES LEADING TO CAREERS IN HOLISTIC MEDICINE

On the Ki Massage Course, students are taught to "flow the Ki" while carrying out treatment

"Jobs that let you get a lot more out of life"

HOW would you like to be working in one of the world's fastest-growing industries? The field of Holistic Medicine offers the potential for a lucrative part- or full-time career, doing work that is of real value to people and offering true fulfilment and job satisfaction.

Clients in all walks of life, but especially in challenging and high-pressure positions demand the services of properly trained holistic therapists to stay in top form and prevent stress building up.

A business opportunity

Holistic therapists starting out can achieve high weekly earnings in just a few evenings per week. For full-time therapists the rewards can be much greater. Initial setup costs can be quite low as many people will work either from their own home in private practice or in conjunction with an established business such as a sports centre, leisure centre, golf club, fitness centre - the list is endless. Furthermore with the right qualifications you can easily work abroad in holiday centres, cruise ships, beach clubs or indeed from your own centre.

Educo System

The Irish Health Culture Association (IHCA - founded 1969) and Irish Association of Holistic Medicine (IAHM - founded 1986) remain Ireland's premier providers of training in Holistic Medicine.

The Diploma Courses are based on the Educo system of Dr. Tony Quinn, which in turn is based on cutting-edge university-validated mind technology research applicable to all areas including medicine. The therapist is taught how to apply the mind technology approach both personally and with clients, leading to greater results with less effort. Indeed Dr. Quinn was awarded his M.Sc. Degree for work in this area which included assisting at four major operations using only mind technology for anaesthesia.

Dreams come true in Kerry

IHCA graduates Paul and Louise Fagan's dreams came true with the opening of their Citrus Natural Therapy Clinic in beautiful Cahersiveen in April 1999. Having between them completed the IHCA Diplomas in Ki Massage, Aromatherapy and Yoga in 1998/9, they left Dublin - and the "office job" - in search of the ideal location to set up a clinic. They wanted to provide a safe, warm and caring environment for their clients and at the same time live in an environment where they felt enthusiasm, energy and zest for life! Paul says "Louise and I apply the holistic approach we learnt on the courses to growing our business." Louise says "It's going very well, and I just love my work in Ki Massage and Yoga."

3 Points to consider about training as a holistic therapist in September 1999.

1. Your initial investment in training can be multiplied by several times in your first year in practice. Can other courses promise the same?
2. You will be the first to benefit from the course in terms of wellbeing, relaxation and energy.
3. There is no time like the present. By acting now you can be in practice by this time next year.
